Futurism says that the majority of eschatological prophecy (most of the Book of Revelation, in particular) has not yet been fulfilled. It will be fulfilled in the future.

Preterism says that the majority of eschatological prophecy (again, most of the Book of Revelation, in particular) has already been fulfilled.

Eclecticism says that the other two views, Futurism and Preterism, both have their merits; they both have some correct and incorrect perspectives.
